I have been breeding the wonderful Siberian cat for nearly 20 years now.

I came to breed Siberian purely by chance. One of my very good friends was a breeder and needed a home for one of her stud boys. Tiggytykes Leopold. And so, it began. I soon acquired a queen. My first red girl, Koolblue Lady of the Lake. I now have 15 studs and Queens.

My interest in the breed soon went beyond the fact they are known as the anti-allergy cat.

I have a great interest in genetics, regarding general health, temperament and colours produced. I feel that with breeders ever pushing to 'improve', it is important that the breed standards kept in mind. Colour genetics are important too, particularly for studs and queen's.
